Most of you visit us from Spanish-speaking countries, but some English-speaking countries begin to jump on the bandwagon. For the about 12% of users accessing from the US and UK, we released a new version of our video-tutorial in English which can be accessed from both our Facebook page and our Youtube channel.

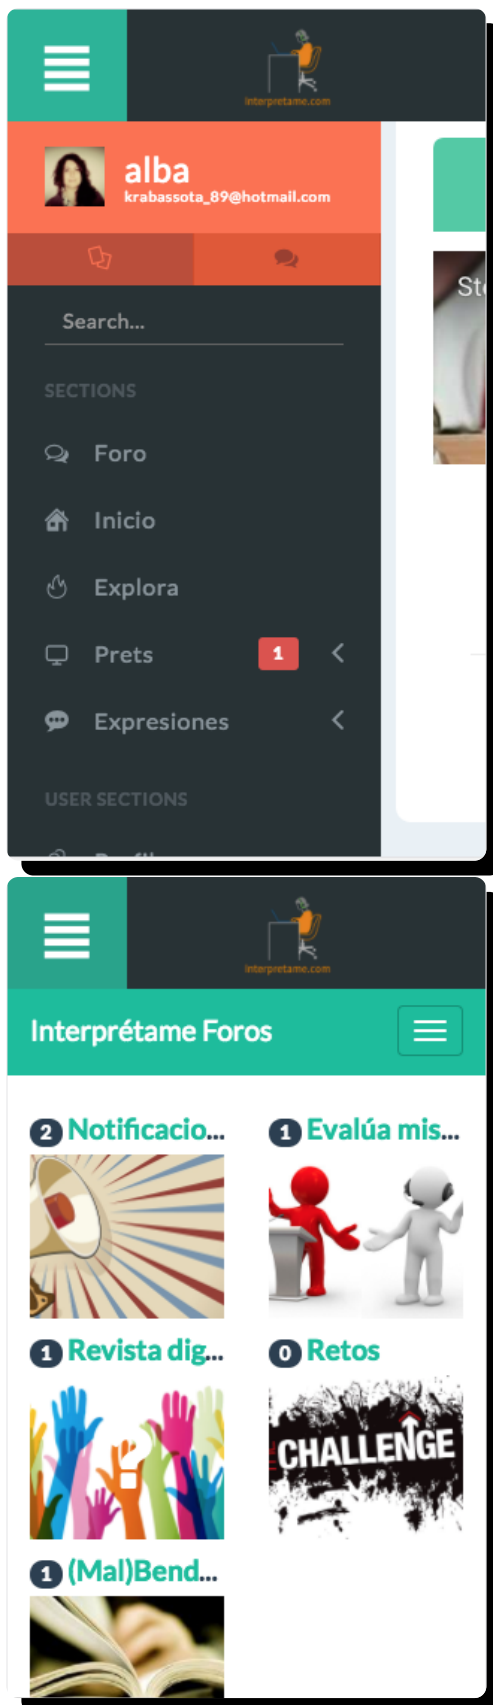

Statistics have also allowed us to discover that most of you access from mobile devices, resolution for which Interpretame was until now not ready.

To solve this and allow you to enjoy the tool even in your commuting time, we have adapted the web application to mobile devices (Responsive). This is how Interpretame will look from your mobile phone.

With Android phones, you'll be able to access all functions; with iOS, although you'll be able to explore the application, read the articles and memorize the new vocabulary stored in your profile, you will not be able to store audios for the time being, because Apple devices do not allow access to the microphone. But do not worry, as soon as we can develop native applications for mobile phones, there will be no barriers to any operating system.

Another one of the improvements we have added this week has been a progress-notifier next to the recorder that will let you know how long it will take to generate the audio from the moment you finish your interpretation. Speed will depend on the power of your computer.

As far as acknowledgments are concerned, the list calls for a separate post (we will do it): you shared our first video-tutorial on Facebook, LinkedIn and even on your personal sites and blogs; you recommended us to your Interpreting teachers, some of whom contacted us to inform us that they will use Interprétame in their classrooms; you reported errors and access problems that helped us add improvements, and you even recommended interesting speeches on Twitter.

For all that, a million thanks to you all. We hope that little by little many more of you can benefit from the tool and start participating, recording Prets, publishing with us and enjoying all benefits Interpretame offers — which we continue working on to expand and improve.

We would also like to take this opportunity to inform you of a new section on the page, "Wiki", where you will be able to access the most common questions and problems as well as all newsletters (also available from the forum).

To end with some big news, we are happy to announce that we have been invited to present Interpretame at the International Congress liLETRAd 2017 that will be held in July in Seville. Many thanks to the organizers!

Best regards, and as we always say: explore it, share it, and above all, enjoy it.

In the section Notificaciones, you can access the content of this newsletter and the previous one . They are in Spanish for now, but we are improving the tool to offer English versions and you can always contact us to receive all information in English, like you did now. In any case, we added you to our English mail-list for next newsletters. :)
